
“PHASE 2” OF CANNABIS LEGALIZATION IS HERE!

Instantly Igniting a New Potential $3.9 Billion
Opportunity for You to Cash In On

Hi, Greg Miller here, the executive director of the National Institute for Cannabis Investors.

I can't remember the last time I've been so excited.

Canada has made marijuana history.

Again.

The first time was in 2018 – when it became the first G20 nation to legalize cannabis for recreational use.

Sales surged up to $210 million in just two and a half months, which is pretty remarkable considering that only dried cannabis flower, oils, and sprays were actually legal.

But that's peanuts compared to what could be right around the corner...

A disruption is coming to the cannabis industry that, according to our estimates, could release $3.9 billion – or even as much as $7.8 billion – into this growing market...

And it can send stocks rocketing 200%... 400%... or even 1,000%.

You see, the regulations passed in 2018 left cannabis-infused edibles, beverages, topicals, and concentrates – including ones containing CBD – off the table.

And if you ask me, that includes a boatload of profits too.

But that could all be about to change...

Round 2 of Cannabis Legalization Is Here!

You see, Canada recently launched “Phase 2” of its legalization plan.

This “Canada 2.0” initiative made the Great White North the first country in the world to legalize cannabis edibles and beverages – along with vapes, topicals, and concentrates.

Accelerating the growth of the recreational cannabis industry...

And potentially shooting sales right through the roof.

In fact, I predict that...

The Projected $2 Billion Revenue Surge Could Trigger a Domino Effect... Unleashing Millions in New Wealth to Savvy Investors.

When it comes to cannabis, Canada is the trendsetter.

And where it goes, the rest of the world follows.

By passing its first phase of cannabis regulation in 2018, it lit a fire in the U.S.

Three more states – Vermont, Michigan, and Illinois – have jumped on board with legalized recreational marijuana. And Missouri, Oklahoma, and Utah have passed laws to make medical cannabis legal.

Things are moving forward on the federal level too.

Lawmakers passed the Farm Bill at the end of 2018, which legalized hemp and – in some measure – CBD. And they’ve been trying to push marijuana legislation through Congress one piece at a time.

We expect to see Canada 2.0 have a similar effect by...

Accelerating the process of regulating cannabis edibles in the U.S...

And nearly quadrupling the North American cannabis market to $47.3 billion by 2024.

Better yet...

If the Sales Spike We Saw in Phase 1

Is Any Indicator, This Canada 2.0 Opportunity Could Be Massive.

Check this out...

Prior to legalization, Tilray's 2018 revenue was limping along at $7.6 million or less per quarter.

After legalization...

Sales leaped 55% to $11.8 million for the final quarter of 2018 – and just kept soaring...

Reaching $17.5 million in the first quarter of 2019 and adding another $34.9 million in the second.

That's a 492% increase over the previous year.

But Tilray wasn't the only one to see a boost in revenue...

When Canada approved recreational cannabis, Aurora Cannabis saw its revenue leap 82% as it grabbed 20% of the newly legal marijuana market.

In its quarter that ended on November 30, 2018, Aphria raked in $16.5 million in sales. That's a 63% increase over the previous quarter with just six weeks of legalized cannabis.

Aphria's revenue continued on a tear...

More than tripling to reach an impressive $56 million in its first full quarter following legalization.

Canopy Growth's earnings soared 260% from the previous quarter to $63.1 million.

And HEXO's sales rocketed more than 378% to $5.1 million...

$3.9 million of which was generated in the first two weeks of legalization.

There's no denying that Canada's first phase of legalization gave the cannabis industry a tremendous boost.

But it pales in comparison to what Canada 2.0 will do.

Because here at NICI, we know that edibles and infused products are the future of cannabis.

For the past year, The Institute has been studying all the major players as they gear up for Phase 2.

And we can't help but think that...

This Is the Biggest Wealth-Making Opportunity We've Seen to Date.

In fact, research firm Deloitte recently did a study on the potential results of Canada 2.0.

They projected that the newly legal cannabis-derivatives market will be worth over $2.05 billion per year.

The edibles market alone is expected to claim $1.2 billion of that.

ArcView Group's prediction goes even further...

Projecting that the cannabis edibles market in the U.S. and Canada will quadruple by 2022 – and reach over $4.1 billion.

And if the government makes a dent in the illicit cannabis market, then the legal market could be even bigger.

The gains could be unreal.

That's why we're writing to you today.

You see... there isn't much time.

These Newly Legal Products Will Hit the Shelves on December 16 – and Then, It's off to the Races.

That gives you a small window of time to jump on board before things really take off.

You'll be glad you did because...

There are TWO reasons why I believe that Canada 2.0 will deliver even more impressive gains than Canada's first round of regulation...

Reason #1: It Opens the Door to Millions of Eager New Customers.

Think about the legal cannabis options Canadians had with Phase 1.

Dried flower, oils, and sprays.

That's it.

And those products only appeal to a limited number of people.

Canada 2.0 brings a smorgasbord of new cannabis products to the table.

Gummies, cookies, chocolates, THC-infused beers and juices, lotions, concentrates... you name it!

These convenient, easy-to-consume products are the perfect entry point to the cannabis market for newcomers.

Not everyone wants to roll a joint – or even knows how to.

But everyone knows how to eat a brownie. Or drink a beverage.

Delivering cannabis in those forms makes it feel more comfortable and familiar.

It also feels safer.

Nearly one in three consumers believes that eating cannabis edibles purchased in licensed stores is safer than smoking a joint.

And demand is already through the roof.

EY Canada Predicts That Three Million New Cannabis Customers Will Enter the Market with Canada 2.0...

Potentially Bringing in Upwards of $1.8 Billion in New Revenue over the Next 12 Months.

But we believe the number could even be greater than that.

A survey conducted at Dalhousie University in 2017 found that 46% of Canadians would try cannabis-infused food products when they become available. That's nearly 13 million people ready and willing to buy cannabis edibles and beverages the moment they hit the shelves.

Now, if the average cannabis user spends $600 a year on cannabis products – as a Gallup poll suggests...

That could release an extra $7.8 billion into Canada's cannabis market within just one year.

Of course, not everyone is going to follow through. But even if just half of these folks start using cannabis edibles and beverages...

That would be an influx of six and a half million new customers into Canada's cannabis market...

And an injection of $3.9 billion into the industry in the space of one year.

Folks, the Resulting Revenue Surge Could Be Unreal.

Cannabis companies would make money hand over fist...

Creating the momentum and power they need to become billion-dollar brands...

And sending their stock prices into orbit.

With nearly half of all Canadians interested in cannabis edibles, the potential market here is huge. And it's eager to buy.

That's why you need to get in on this now – before the new cannabis products hit the shelves.

The possible windfalls in a scenario like this could change everything.

The type of car you drive... the type of house you live in... the type of vacations you take... even the standard of living you can expect during retirement.

And this is just one reason that I think Canada 2.0 could unleash unprecedented profit opportunities for cannabis companies and investors alike.

Here's the second reason...

Reason #2: Canada 2.0 Gives Companies a Shot at Significantly Higher Margins – for Increased Profits and Share Prices.

Canadians are going from having just a few limited cannabis choices...

To literally hundreds.

You can see why cannabis companies have been scrambling to get into the edibles market.

They're following the money. Remember...

The Cannabis Edibles Market in the U.S. and Canada Is Expected to Explode to $4.1 Billion by 2022.

Talk about being on a tear!

In 2017, spending on edibles in North America was just $1 billion.

And it's expected to quadruple in just five years.

But get this...

In the same time frame, global edible sales are projected to shoot from $9.5 billion all the way up to $32 billion.

Meaning that the cannabis edibles market could more than triple in growth worldwide – in just a few years.

That's why companies have been rushing to get into this market...

Like the two cannabis companies I want to tell you about today.

Both of them have expanded into Canada's edibles and beverage market...

Where up to 13 million new customers could land on their doorstep.

And both companies are facing an extraordinary opportunity for rapid, exponential growth.

In fact, the surges in profits could send these currently under-the-radar stocks into the stratosphere.

This First Opportunity Makes You Part-Owner of Several Private Cannabis Edibles Companies – and the Profit Potential Is Enormous.

This company is what we call an “angel investor.”

Like the sharks that you see on TV, it invests in private companies and helps them grow.

These are companies that aren’t listed on the New York Stock Exchange...

They’re not on the Nasdaq...

And they don’t even show up on the Toronto Stock Exchange or the Canadian Securities Exchange.

Regular folks rarely hear about these “angel” opportunities. And they certainly don’t have easy access to them.

But now, you can get access... through this one tiny angel company.

This Cannabis “Angel” Has Evaluated over 1,500 Private Firms in Its Quest to Partner with Only the Best of the Best.

It only wants to hit home runs.

That’s why it’s only made 18 investments in private cannabis companies to date.

With an injection of capital and a bit of nurturing, one of this company’s investments could end up being the next Canopy Growth.

And the faster and bigger they grow... the more money this tiny angel company makes.

Canada 2.0 only heightens the opportunity here.

Three members of this angel’s portfolio are in Canada’s newly legal edibles and beverage sectors – where up to 13 million potential cannabis customers are eagerly waiting for products to hit the shelves.

They could be on the brink of a sales explosion that could send their revenues soaring.

These private portfolio companies include...

1. The Cannabis Grower with the Exclusive Distribution Deal

This licensed cannabis cultivator also happens to own the first supercritical CO2 extraction lab built in Canada.

Its state-of-the-art growing and extraction capabilities have made it the perfect partner for U.S. companies looking to cash in on the legal cannabis environment in Canada.

Through licensing agreements, this private grower sells a variety of branded cannabis products. But an exclusive agreement with a U.S.-based manufacturer and distributor of cannabis-infused items could put its revenue right over the top.

This deal gives the firm the sole right to sell this U.S. company's cannabis brands in Canada – including these two brands in the promising edibles and beverage sectors...

- The Nevada Gummy King: This edibles maker just happens to produce one of the best-selling gummies in Nevada.
The gummies are low in sugar... gluten-free... and infused with one of several strains of the finest premium CO2 cannabis oil. They come in a variety of crowd-pleasing flavors such as blue raspberry, cherry cola, and tropical punch.
- The Colorado Cannabis-Beverage Maker: This company has already taken Colorado by storm. It produces high-quality, THC-infused drinks – tailoring them to meet the consumer's specific needs.
Whether the user is seeking relaxation, energy, or even sleep, the "functional ingredients" added to this cannabis beverage formula – such as chamomile, green tea, or melatonin – create a "layered effect" to help them get the desired result each and every time.

You can see why the tiny angel company partnered with this private firm. Its well-established cultivating and extraction business – coupled with some strategically brilliant licensing deals – could unleash a flood of revenue as Canada's cannabis market continues to heat up.

The 20-year royalty stream that the angel company gets in return for its funding should, according to my projections, add $4 million to its income in the next year alone.

2. The Canadian “Lifestyle” THC-Beverage Company

This private Canadian company just received its research and development license from Health Canada to create branded cannabis-infused beverages.

And they are gearing up to put a fresh spin on THC-infused drinks.

By tapping into the power of cannabis to enhance experiences, they're using advanced technology to create THC-infused beverages (and eventually edibles) that are specifically designed to fit the lifestyle of their customers.

With Canada 2.0 releasing a flood of cannabis in different formats that Canadians are excited to try, this little beverage company that caters to consumers' unique needs could be on the brink of massive growth.

3. The Healthy CBD-Juice Company

This member of the angel investor's portfolio is taking the health-boosting power of its popular plant-based juices up a notch by adding a new ingredient – CBD.

With the brand awareness and infrastructure already in place – and with a $6.8 million injection of cash from the angel investor – this move into Canada's newly legal CBD beverage market should be a piece of cake.

And as hot as the CBD market is right now, this should be a profit-making machine.

Here's the thing about CBD...

Not only does it help with a number of health problems – such as chronic pain, anxiety, and depression – it does so without making you “high.”

That makes it easier to sell to consumers who normally wouldn't touch cannabis with a 10-foot pole.

This CBD strategy could draw in tens of thousands of new customers for this private juice company – and could help them grab a greater portion of the growing $4.2 trillion global health and wellness market.

The better these companies perform... the more this cannabis capital-investment company can make.

And thanks to Canada 2.0., these companies have access to new markets – and potentially millions of new customers.

With Canada's cannabis edibles and beverage markets expected to pull in over $1.6 billion per year...

The revenue potential for this angel investor is enormous.

This tiny company has been actively recruiting what it predicts will be cannabis “winners” to add to its portfolio...

Not just in Canada but around the world.

Thanks to its solid investment strategy... a hefty bank account... and a knowledgeable management team, its stock could soar $590% by February 17 according to one analyst.

That could turn a $5,000 investment into $34,500.

And if you were to invest $10,000, you could be looking at a $59,000 windfall.

People who take advantage of this rare opportunity could make more money than they know what to do with...

Before February 17.

And this is just one company that could take off like a shot with Canada 2.0. Now, let me tell you about another one...

This Tiny Cultivator Is Ready to Leverage This Fresh Wave of Demand for 300% Gains.

This Canadian company has been producing indoor-grown cannabis for patients and adult-recreational consumers for years – but it's somehow managed to avoid the limelight.

I think all of that is about to change.

They have been strategically positioning themselves to generate a potential flood of revenue.

- Their facilities are based in the province that just happens to be in a region with the highest adult-use rates for cannabis in all of Canada. That gives them the “home advantage” over other cultivators when it comes to raking in the sales...
- They're joining cannabis giants Canopy Growth and Aphria as one of the few Canadian cultivators to score supply agreements with all 10 provinces in the country...
- And they've been revamping one of their facilities to significantly increase extraction capacity with one lofty goal in mind...

Expanding into the Newly Legal Cannabis Derivatives Markets to Take Advantage of the Expected Sky-High Demand.

They know the impact that Canada 2.0 could have on the cannabis industry.

It could open up new markets – and give them access to potentially millions of new customers.

And this could significantly add to their bottom line.

So they've been busy preparing to launch a line of cannabis edibles at the end of 2019.

They've invested in completely automated infused-edible equipment...

And they have plans in the works to produce about four million kilograms of chocolate cannabis edibles per year.

But It's Their Breakthrough Cannabis Technology That Will Really Give Them the Edge over Their Competitors.

You see: Cannabis edibles and beverage companies have two problems...

1. Controlling the dosage of THC in their products, and...
2. Delivering a predictable result (or "high") every single time.

The proprietary technology developed by this tiny company is the solution to both of those problems...

And it could potentially make them a fortune.

By using nano-emulsion, they have managed to create microdroplets of cannabinoids that are very small and uniform.

In this state, THC dosing becomes more reliable – and much more controlled.

Not only that, but...

The miniscule size of the cannabinoid molecules allows them to bypass a large part of the metabolism – and therefore get absorbed faster.

In fact, they get absorbed so quickly that edibles and beverages infused with them deliver the desired effect within 10 to 15 minutes.

With most cannabis-infused edibles and beverages, it could take anywhere from 45 minutes to two hours to get the desired “high.”

This breakthrough technology is a huge game changer for this tiny company. And they aren’t only using it to infuse their line of chocolates with cannabis.

Their scientists have already figured out how to use the emulsification system to turn the micro-sized cannabis molecules into dissolvable powder...

The perfect form of cannabis for their new line of powdered drinks.

Once word gets out about this company’s ability to deliver a consistent and reliable buzz, they won’t be able to keep their cannabis-infused products on the shelves.

Skyrocketing Sales Are Expected to Set off a Stock Surge of over 300%.

Everything is in place for this company to score a major win in the cannabis edibles sector.

Inventory has been stockpiled for extraction...

Strategic partnerships have been made...

And a solid, low-cost operating system has been established.

With every “i” dotted and every “t” crossed, this tiny company is positioned better than most to take advantage of the burgeoning cannabis edibles sector.

Its revenue is expected to soar 439% to $110.6 million in 2019 and continue to grow...

Possibly more than doubling in 2020.

That could drive their stock price up by 300% by June 2020.

An increase like that could turn a $5,000 investment into $20,000...

Or a $10,000 investment into $40,000...

In just about six months.

Remember...

The cannabis edibles and beverage market was just made legal, but these companies have likely been preparing for this moment.

By the time December 16 arrives, they could have spent 424 days gearing up so that they could hit the ground running.

That's 10,176 hours – or 610,560 minutes – getting ready for what could be their biggest profit maker ever.

Canada 2.0 got them to the starting line. It allowed cannabis companies to begin the 60-day application process to get their edibles and beverages onto shelves across the country.

And When the Pistol Sounds on December 16, Those Cannabis Products Will Start Pouring into the Market

Where eager customers are ready and willing to buy them.

Sales could go through the roof – to the tune of $1.6 billion per year.

You've seen how these sales could drive shares up 590% for the angel investing company – and 300% for the cultivator turned edibles maker.

This could be a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to see extraordinary gains.

Canada 2.0 is giving people an alternative to smokable cannabis products – and creating a potential gold mine for one up-and-coming company.

You see, extraction is becoming a big business in the cannabis industry. Someone needs to remove the THC, CBD, and other cannabinoids from the cannabis plant to create oils, concentrates, edibles, and beverages.

And this extraction company has got it down to a science.

It has the greatest extraction capacity, the biggest variety of extraction methods, the most contracts with growers, and the only organic certification for extraction. And its customer list reads like a “Who’s Who” of the cannabis industry.

This extractor’s revenue is expected to nearly triple as it scales in 2020 – and Wall Street analysts believe its stock has a possible upside of 157%.

We think it could do twice that – maybe even more. That’s why we want to get this report to you ASAP... while you can still cash in on some potentially huge gains.

Delivering potentially huge windfalls to investors.
